Sid Williams Richardson established the Richardson Foundation in 1947 for the purpose of supporting organizations that serve the people of Texas. Throughout the years, the directors and staff have sought to fulfill his vision by providing grants primarily to educational, health, human service, and cultural organizations. When substantial income from assets from the late Mr. Richardson’s estate became available in 1962, the Foundation began its current program of distributing major grants, which have totaled $379,215,980.

A lifelong resident of Texas, Mr. Richardson was born on April 25, 1891, in the East Texas town of Athens. Although his interests reached beyond Texas and his personal contacts were worldwide, he retained his utmost concern for the people of his home state. For this reason, he provided in the Foundation’s charter that all grants be awarded to recipients within the state of Texas.

Oil, cattle, and land formed the basis of his lifework. His fortune paralleled the boom and bust nature of the petroleum industry in its early years, but his inherent drive for accomplishment, coupled with his keen insight into human nature and sincere interest in people, contributed more than anything else to his success. He had an amazing instinct about people.

His capacity for generating and maintaining real friendships was exceptional, and he loved to be around true friends. His friends knew him as a man of great courage, yet soft-spoken, kind, sentimental, and loyal to everyone who befriended him.

Mr. Richardson was as much at home with cowboys in a country cafe as dining in fine New York restaurants. He was in no sense extravagant or flamboyant, however, and he was unimpressed with ostentatiousness and people who practiced it.

He had a strong desire to create and build, and his entrepreneurship led him to accept challenges and pursue them time and time again. He was known for his ability to condense complicated situations into simple “horse sense” that endeared him to presidents and business executives. When once asked to describe his own business philosophy, he said, “I guess my philosophy of business life is: Don’t be in too big of a hurry, don’t get excited, and don’t lose your sense of humor.”

His reputation as a tireless dealmaker stayed with him to the end of his life. After a full day’s work, he died quietly in his sleep on September 30, 1959.

In addition to Mr. Richardson’s business dealings, a love for Western art emerged from his ranching experience, which provided him with vivid impressions of the Old West.
He became an avid collector of paintings by Frederic Remington and Charles M. Russell. He thought they captured, better than any other artists, the vitality, color, and motion that he had always associated with the West. Today, these magnificent paintings are on permanent exhibit in Fort Worth, Texas, in the Sid Richardson Museum, which is supported by the Foundation. Since the museum opened in 1982, approximately one million visitors from all 50 states and 68 countries have come to view the paintings.

Mr. Richardson continues to have a tremendous impact on his native state through the broad and diverse programs of the Richardson Foundation.
The year 2010 was Val Wilkie’s final full year as head of the Sid W. Richardson Foundation. As we look back at 2010 for this report, we cannot help but reflect on the nearly four decades that Val was at the helm of the Foundation.

Over the course of 2010, the Foundation continued to do the work that is the hallmark of the decades of Val’s stewardship of the Foundation’s resources and good name. Education was at the forefront, with funding and Val’s personal leadership devoted to improving the quality of education for children all across Texas. The Foundation invested in health care, from providing funding for neighborhood clinical services for the neediest among us to investing in medical research that will help shape the health care future of our state and nation. Over a year when public and private resources were strained by recession, the Foundation funded organizations helping the citizens of Fort Worth meet their basic needs and those of their families. The Foundation continued its support of the performing arts, museums, and other cultural amenities that contribute to the quality of life throughout North Texas.

And, as he has done for 38 years, Val Wilkie led the people of our community to put aside their differences and work together for the common good. He mentored young and old and enriched the lives of everyone who had the good fortune to work with him or share his friendship. Education, health care, human services, and the arts, in Fort Worth and across the state—Val is leaving them better than he found them when Perry Bass called him from New England to Texas in the summer of 1973.

As you have taken the time to read this piece, I am confident you are included in the “we” recently spoken by the Foundation’s chairman, Ed Bass, while reflecting on Val’s service:

We all share one thing in common: Val has in some way over the past four decades touched our lives. He has been a friend, advisor, mentor, and more to all of us.

On June 30, 2011, the Foundation said farewell, but not goodbye, to Val. He will continue to work for the betterment of our community and state over the next chapter of his career of service. “Retirement” is not in his vocabulary. From his new office in downtown Fort Worth, Val will continue to mentor, advise, counsel, and cajole our citizens to do good, to be better.

To Val Wilkie, friend, advisor, mentor, and more, we thank you.

Pete Geren
President

"FAREWELL," BUT NOT "GOODBYE"
A year ago in the annual report for the Foundation, I looked back over my 37 years of service to the Foundation and the nonprofit organizations in Fort Worth and across Texas, and then ahead to my approaching retirement. Now that milestone has been reached.

I leave the Foundation with a mixture of feelings. First and foremost, I feel great satisfaction and pride in all that we have accomplished together, the involvement and support of the Board, the dedication and caring of our outstanding staff, and the extraordinary commitment of all of you in the nonprofit community who have been our partners and given so much of yourselves to realize the goals you set in serving the thousands of people in our community and across the state.

Of course, I will always miss my daily association with so many of you; however, I do have an office in the Wells Fargo bank tower where I will be available for conversations on issues of our mutual interest.

Finally, I want to welcome and congratulate Pete Geren as he assumes the leadership of the Foundation. He is an outstanding individual and leader who is an ideal choice to continue the role of the Foundation in assisting all of our nonprofit friends in carrying on their important missions. – Valleau Wilkie, Jr.

Chartered in the Rio Grande Valley in 1991, Teach For America has recruited more than 1,200 teachers, who have taught over 140,000 students across 16 districts. It recruits outstanding recent college graduates who commit to teach at least two years in a low-income community. With rigorous training and ongoing support, these teachers work relentlessly to ensure that students growing up in low-income areas are provided the educational opportunities they deserve. Upwards of 140 Teach For America alumni live and work in South Texas, with more than 90 percent of them working at the center of the organization’s efforts as pioneers of education reform initiatives, award-winning teachers, and leaders of high-performing schools in its region’s lowest-income neighborhoods. In 2010, 194 Teach For America teachers worked in 12 school districts to unleash the potential of over 16,300 children growing up in low-income communities of South Texas. (www.teachforamerica.org)

Opened in 1981, the The Cattle Raisers Museum provides learning experiences for people of all ages on both the rich heritage of the livestock industry of the Southwest and the commitment that today’s cattle raisers have for their land and livestock. The museum is located within the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History. Education initiatives, exhibits, programming, and scholarships teach current and future generations of the rancher’s devotion to natural resource stewardship and supplying consumers with the safest and most nutritional beef in the world. Video conferencing is utilized to reach schools throughout the nation to enrich a student’s study of history, science, and math while learning more about the Western lifestyle. In 2010, almost one half million guests from all around the world visited the museum, and 68,200 school children experienced it on a field trip. (www.cattleraisersmuseum.org)
Established in 1995, H.I.K.I.D.S, Inc. (Helping Inner-city Kids In Danger) is a motivational program designed to aid all participating youth to develop self-confidence and self-reliance and realize their potential. With the help of volunteers, churches, and local businesses, this goal is accomplished through personal outreach and planned activities such as camping, hiking, fishing, sporting events, museum visits, and events that include the entire family. These activities enhance and promote family life. HIKIDS leaders and volunteers model and expect exemplary sportsmanship and respect during all activities. They hold a meeting every Tuesday and Thursday night at two locations in Fort Worth providing tutoring, mentoring, and many more programs that teach the “earn mentality.” The leaders praise and reward the children to recognize their academic achievements. The HIKIDS program is free with a valid community center membership card. HIKIDS served 2,000 kids in 2010. (www.fwhikids.org)

Formerly All Church Home for Children, ACH Child and Family Services has been protecting children and preserving families since 1915. All of ACH’s programs are designed to prevent, intervene, and treat child abuse, neglect, and family separation. ACH offers a full array of both immediate and long-term services to children, youth, and families from residential care to emergency youth shelter and from intensive, in-home, family counseling services to street outreach. In 2010, 3,700 children and families were helped through ACH’s continuum of care, which includes 17 residential and community-based programs in a five-county area, Hill, Johnson, Palo Pinto, Parker, and Tarrant. Through a $9.5 million capital campaign, ACH is funding the renovation of nine buildings and new construction on its new Wichita Street Campus. Three buildings have completed renovation or construction and are operational; the final three buildings undergoing renovation in the current phase will open in 2012. (www.achservices.org)
Since 1903, Tarrant County Medical Society physicians have worked to address dozens of public health issues and helped shape the medical community we enjoy today. This past year, TCMS was able to expand medical services to underserved patients in Fort Worth. One way TCMS accomplished that was by coordinating free eye exams for 1,000 local middle and high school athletic students during free sport physicals. These exams were donated by a TCMS physician and her staff. Because TCMS is able to connect physicians’ services in our community, TCMS has created a new program called “Project Access Tarrant County.” PATC will provide health care access to the uninsured and working poor of Tarrant County by creating a volunteer network of physicians, hospitals, charitable clinics, and other community partners. PATC will expand health care access and improve health outcomes for citizens of Tarrant County. (www.tcms.org/PATC.aspx)

The Texas Academy of Biomedical Sciences Preparatory and High School is an extraordinary opportunity for students to explore math, science, and technology in a learning environment that often resembles university pre-med classes. The Fort Worth Independent School District, Tarrant County College, the University of North Texas Health Science Center, and the University of North Texas work together to provide an academic experience not found in other secondary schools. TABS places students on a pathway to realizing their dream of becoming a doctor, pharmacist, veterinarian, emergency medical technician, or forensic scientist. Summer programs for both schools allow TABS students a firsthand view of graduate and medical school facilities and operations. First-time graduates of the summer program receive their own white lab coats. TABS Prep finished its inaugural year at the close of the 2010-2011 school year, and TABS High School will see its first freshman class in 2011-2012. (www.fwisd.org/tabs)
Founded in 1991, Samaritan House provides housing and resources for people with HIV/AIDS and other special needs. Belief in the importance of giving people a voice led to the creation of the Samaritan House Inspirational Choir. Partnering with Sheran Keyton and DVA Productions, the choir has performed in varied venues, including churches, hotels, parks, community centers, and schools. Performing before audiences that have included needy families, the homeless, volunteers, church members, and school children has provided an opportunity for participants to grow in self-confidence and to experience firsthand the critical importance of teamwork. The choir gets people of all ages clapping and cheering as it rocks, rolls, and sings of hope, lessons learned, and obstacles overcome. The inspired choir members have overcome homelessness and illness to perform and are held together by the knowledge that they are inspiring others. In 2010, Samaritan House served 402 people. The curriculum includes basic computer skills: keyboarding, Microsoft Word, Excel, email functionality, and Internet usage. The training enabled 127 students to learn marketable computer skills, empowering them to rebuild their self-esteem and self-confidence. Another 23 students attended evening GED classes to increase their potential for employment. In addition to core services, the Alliance provides evening meals and child care to alleviate barriers to attendance. Established in 1984, the Presbyterian Night Shelter is a place of trust, respect, and caring for the homeless, helping them regain their quality of life. Its mission is to end homelessness, one individual at a time. Serving the needs of the homeless while respecting their dignity, PNS is the only free area emergency shelter without length-of-stay restrictions. Located on a five-acre campus east of downtown Fort Worth, the shelter is the largest provider of services for the area homeless population, supplying meals, beds, and basic human care, case management, and employment services to an average of 650 homeless clients each night of the week, every week of the year. The shelter offers resources, enabling clients to reenter mainstream society, and employs at least 20 homeless clients, who handle day-to-day operations in each of its four facilities. PNS served 3,575 homeless people in 2010. (www.pns-tc.org)
Organized in 1969 to help families break the cycle of hunger and poverty, the Northside Inter-Church Agency has grown to become the largest and most comprehensive multiservice provider of basic needs, goods, and services for the northwest quadrant of Tarrant County. In August 2010, NICA began participating in the Mobile Food Pantry sponsored by the Tarrant Area Food Bank. Once a month, the food bank delivers fruit, vegetables, dairy products, meats, and other items to the hundreds of families that gather at NICA. With a growing number of families needing emergency services, NICA has been struggling to acquire enough food to keep the pantry stocked. In 2010, more than 37,000 individuals were helped with crisis counseling, food, clothing, financial aid, education classes, mentoring, computer training, and other social services. Frederic Remington’s popular oil painting, The Love Call, depicts a lone Indian playing a flute beside a tree in the evening twilight. Completed in the last year of his life, it was only exhibited twice from the time it was painted and then remained in private collections until 1996 when it was acquired by the Sid Richardson Museum. The painting was used as a backdrop for the meeting of Pope Paul VI and President Lyndon B. Johnson in October 1965 at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City.
